Handyman Matters is helping Iraqi carpenters rebuild country

San Antonio Business Journal

Handyman Matters of San Antonio is assisting in the rebuilding of war-torn Iraq.

Franchise co-owner Walter Caraballo is currently in Iraq to lend his support to the I-BIZ (Iraqi Base Industrial Zone) program. The I-BIZ program is a business development program backed by the U.S and Coalition Forces to provide tools and vocational training to Iraqi citizens to help them rebuild their country. The program has operations on 11 bases throughout Iraq.

There was a need in the program for proper carpentry tools. Handyman Matters is donating supplies — carpenter pencils and tape measures — to program graduates.

“At Handyman Matters, it’s more than just providing our services to those in our immediate community; it’s about planting roots all around the world and showing our customers that we support everyone,” Caraballo says. “It’s very important for me and my brother to work together and help support our country with re-building Iraq.”

Handyman Matters is a national franchise concept that specializes in performing small- to medium-sized repair, restoration and maintenance projects for both residential and business customers. The master franchise company is based in Lakewood, Colo.
